

“And so hence forth there lived a terrible dragon who dwelt therein in the land of Cincinnati...” The dragon’s name was Fred, “Fred The Dragon.”

When Fred wasn’t having fun playing checkers with the virgin that the villagers tried to offer to him as a sacrifice, but who was now his room mate, he was busy working at the local skating rink driving a Zamboni. Many people feared Fred, but they had no real cause to, because Fred was really an extremely cool dude. His favorite food was nachos with cheese, and he loved to eat them while watching T.V. Shows like America’s Stupidest Criminals, Bowling for Pizza, World’s Dumbest Game Show Bloopers, Dumbass, and Celebrity Hockey. Fred used to have a girlfriend, She was a Giraffe who lived at the Cincinnati Zoo And Botanical Gardens. Her name was Elicia. Elicia Nancy Jorganson The 3rd (she was from a snooty rich Giraffe family from Rhodesia). The relationship ended tragically when Elicia found out too late that she was allergic to peanuts. 400 people showed up at the zoo to pay their respects — as she was quite loved. Fred never really got over it. He kinda felt horrible for a really long time, until his room mate Yolanda Quentos moved in. Fred realized that because he was a dragon and was 35 feet tall, he could never have a romantic relationship with her, but she was great company anyway, because she was a very good friend, and an extremely good listener...
